CUTTING HAY.

There are a great many things in farming, as well as in other callings, that are acquiesced in as true and yet are largely ignored in practice. One of G. White. these is with regard to the time when All druggists sell Dr. Miles' Nervo Plasters. hay should be cut. As a matter of be-Hef nearly every one almits that grass should be cut early, more palatable and more digestible. As a matter of practice however, many farmers let the seed form and the hay become woody before catting. In some localities, with timothy especially, where the grass is grown for seed, a header is used to take off the seed crop, and afterwards the stalks are cut and it is called hay. It is really not hay at all; it is straw, and it has no higher feeding value than straw well cured would have. Of course, if one can make more money out of a timothy crop by heading first for seed and then taking the straw for feeding purposes, that ends the matter. But this is hardly ever the case, and the practice generally rests upon a sort of vague idea that the grass will be pretty nearly as good for feeding purposes and that the seed crop will be just so much in. This is a serious mistake, for the only real return obtained by the practice is the seed. If that is worth more than the hay crop would be if cut seasonably, then take the seed crop, by all means, but don't do it on the strength of the idea that three or four bushels of seed, plus a considerable feeding value in the straw, will equal a good, fair value for a crop of hay seasonably cut and well cured. Of course, in the case of other grasses where the seed crop has no special market value, allowing the grass to The Beecher family is one whose stand until late is a serious injury to branches are very many and whose lines the feeding value of the hay crop with-
